

Right to mental Health support

It's my right to mental health support

It's my right to be happy and safe. That means that when something is troubling me mentally, I have the freedom to ask for help, and have access to support. If my family can't afford to pay for support, the government can help pay for this.

(Art. 27 of the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child).

